Community Sponsor

Since 2005, a group of Ridgewood dads and their sons have organized and participated in an annual baseball tournament coupled with a goodwill mission to a depressed area of the Dominican Republic. The trip is centered around San Pedro de Macoris, the birthplace of a disproportionate number of baseball stars, such names as Pedro Ciriaco, Sammy Sosa, Fernando Tatis, Robinson Cano, and many others. In addition to playing in a baseball tournament with local teams specifically scheduled for this group, the boys and dads donate their time and energy toward a worthwhile local community service project. In years past, we have provided labor for the construction of a school, a community building and an athletic field. This year, the group will carry on the tradition and will be gathering and delivering the supplies, building a basketball court, visiting with the locals, and playing baseball.
